The success of the New York Boss in nominating his candidate for Governor will no doubt have in Pennsylvania an effect which was neither expected nor described by the Arthur Administration. The Chicago Tribune says of it:

September 21, 1882.

It has been pretty definitely settled that Tazewell Branch (colored), of Farmville, will be nominated by the Straightouts as their candidate for Congress in this district. An opportunity will be given the colored people, if they are sincere in their wishes, to vote for and elect to Congress feet which was neither expected nor described by the Arthur Administration. Senator Mahone cheerfully explains to a discharged clerk (appointed from Virginia to a desk in the Interior Department at Washington) that he (Senator Mahone) caused his discharge, and that he did so for political reasons. This Mahone is a frank man, who makes a business of politics, and has probably put on record for the first time the real reason for political appointments and removals. The clerk was, it seems, making use of his rights as a citizen of Virginia; and this, it will be remembered is a liberty which has been stoutly claimed for such clerks.
